

Significant number of data sets demonstrate no value in trying to control adults to prevent damage from southern corn rootworm